

ÉPREUVE ÉCRITE

Ministère de l'Éducation nationale et de la Formation professionnelle

EXAMEN DE FIN D'ÉTUDES SECONDAIRES TECHNIQUES

Division des Professions de Santé et des Professions sociales

BRANCHE : ANGLAIS

DATE : 4 juin 2009

DURÉE : 3 heures

PART I: GRAMMAR EXERCISE

(15 MARKS / -1 PER DIFFICULTY)

Put the verbs between brackets into the correct tense, form and voice:

- 1 I didn't know that you would not be at home when I returned. I (take) my key with me if I (know) that the door would be locked! (2m)
- 2 Last Friday, the children (be) so happy when the bus (arrive) to take them on their school trip. They (look forward) to their day at the zoo for weeks. (3m)

Complete the following sentences with gerund or infinitive constructions using prepositions where necessary:

- 3 You aren't likely (pass) your exams if you continue (pay) so little attention in class. (2m)
- 4 Luckily the police managed (prevent) the man (jump) off the bridge. (2m)

Combine or rewrite the following sentences using present or past participle constructions:

- 5 The dog heard a strange noise. It jumped up and started barking. (1m)
- 6 She did not know what was inside. She quickly opened her present. (1m)

Put the following sentences into the passive voice:

- 7 Shakespeare wrote many famous plays. Theatre companies all over the world are still performing them. (2m)

Use modal auxiliaries in the correct tense and form to complete the following sentences :

- 8 You (* not/ see) Mike in a play! He has such a terrible memory, he would never act. It (* /be) somebody else performing as Romeo. (2m)

Put the following sentences into reported speech in the past:

- 9 Managing director last Friday: "We are closing the factory next week. All the workers will be dismissed." (max. 3m)

Combine the following sentences using a relative clause:

- 10 Do you see the man? He is getting into that red car over there. (1m)
- 11 This is the actress. Her husband has run off with a younger woman. (1m)

PART II: QUESTIONS ON TEXTS FROM IDEAS & ISSUES ADVANCED

(15 MARKS)

Single Parents

- 1 How does the author of the article Single out the selfish breeders show her anger about teenage mothers in Britain, and what arguments does she use to justify her anger? (8m)

Violent Youth

- 2 What explanations are given in the text Girls are turning to violent crime for girls' involvement in criminal actions? (7m)

PART III: UNKNOWN TEXT

Teachers walk out in trainers row by Tom Bishop

Teachers are not known for their dress sense but a row over what they wear has escalated into strike action at an east London school.

For 17 years Adrian Swain wore trainers and tracksuit bottoms while teaching Maths and Science at St Paul's Way Community School in Tower Hamlets. He also worked with children with disabilities and helped 96% of his GCSE students achieve grades A to C in Maths. But the 56-year-old was fired in December after refusing to follow an unofficial dress code imposed by an acting head teacher three months earlier.

Mr Swain argued his clothing was irrelevant to his teaching ability and said staff had not been consulted over the "inconsistent" dress code. "It banned us from wearing 'anything students aren't allowed to wear', which included hooded tops and trainers," Mr Swain says. "But teachers and students have always been treated differently, otherwise we would all be wearing school uniform."

Earlier this month Mr Swain lost an appeal against his dismissal, with Tower Hamlets council saying he set a bad example to students by refusing to follow management instruction. The school's National Union of Teachers (NUT) members responded by voting for a series of one-day strikes, demanding his reinstatement. With 60 of the school's 100 staff expected to take part, it could result in the school being closed for up to five days. It reflects a growing strength of feeling about what teachers wear.

There is no national dress code for teachers as the Department for Children, Schools and Families leaves individual head teachers to set rules about staff dress if they feel it necessary. A number of schools and academies do apply dress codes, including Walworth Academy in south-east London, where teachers are asked not to wear denim or leather.

Such moves have been welcomed by Conservative schools spokesman Michael Gove, who said smart dress enhanced the "professional standing" of teaching staff. Mr Gove added he would give "full backing" to schools that introduced staff dress codes, which he said would boost their standing among pupils, parents and the wider community.

But an NUT spokeswoman said it was a mistake to regard schools as the same as other places of work. "A school is not a business and it does not have to operate as such," she said. "We are here to educate young people and part of their education is the appreciation of diversity - understanding that people like to be different and like to look different."

Mr Swain is eager to return to St Paul's Way school but he remains defiant. "I've never been in favour of staff dress codes or uniforms, but I would have been happy to go along with it had we been consulted beforehand," he says. "To me, a dress code is a way to pretend something is being done to make a school better when in fact what should be addressed is under-achievement by students. They could have ended this whole discussion if they could point to a single piece of research which points to any relationship whatsoever between exam results and staff dress."

The NUT spokeswoman said St Paul's Way school will "almost certainly" shut if strikes go ahead as planned from 19 March. "We do not want to disrupt the students but we feel they have been disrupted by Adrian's unfair dismissal," she said. "We will do everything we can to get him reinstated."

(568 words / adapted from BBC NEWS 16.03.2009)

Comprehension Questions

(20 MARKS)

Answer the following questions about the text in your own words as far as possible.

- 1 Describe Adrian Swain as a teacher, and explain why he has been fired. (6m)
- 2 How do the Department for Children, Schools and Families, and Michael Gove think about dress codes for teachers? (5m)
- 3 What is the NUT's reaction to Adrian Swain's case? (4m)
- 4 What is Adrian Swain's attitude to the whole dress code issue? (5m)

Development Question

(10 MARKS)

Write a short essay about the following topic. Write 150 words (+/- 10%). Indicate the number of words used!

How important do you personally consider dress codes at work? What reason is there for your opinion?